Colorado Attorney General Cynthia H. Coffman Engaging Community Leaders to Improve Colorado Quality of Life

GREELEY – Colorado Attorney General Cynthia H. Coffman travels today to Weld County to meet with citizens and community leaders to discuss a variety of topics including substance abuse, environmental and consumer protection issues and teen after school programs. Today's trip marks the Attorney General's continued efforts to engage Colorado communities and improve the quality of life of Coloradans.

"Discussing the issues that matter to Coloradans and then effecting change for the good, is the very best part of my job," said Colorado Attorney General Cynthia H. Coffman. "One of my first initiatives as attorney general has been developing the Office of Community Engagement. This coordinated effort targets public safety and consumer protection issues facing folks around the state."
